Caving adventure in New Zealand

In February and March 2017 a member of NGF had been on vacation in New Zealand driving around in a mobile home. Knowing a local guide at Golden Bay, a stop was made to go caving. The cave chosen was filled with all kinds of stalactites and stalagmites, as well as offering climbing and jumping down into potholes. Before leaving the cave completely wet, due to the last jump into 4 - 5m deep water, some glow worms were viewed and studied. To read more about caves in NZ, specially the Waitomo area, an earlier article was written by Torstein Finnesand in NGB nr. 25, pp. 27-32, 1992.
