

Norsk Grotteblad nr 25, Desember 1992

Finner man ikke en hule - Lager man en hule

A local name on a map which seems to indicate a cave, got a group of cavers to drive 240 kilometres and walk 500 metres up a steep mountainside - in snow and with a lot of equipment. They could hardly find limestone in the area, and "the caves" were only very, very small holes - covered by ice. As real optimists, they will return at summertime!