

Karawari

Karawari

One of the areas to be protected by means of funds from this year's national television project is the Karawari in New Guinea. In this hilly woodland there are no roads and few trails, but many exciting caves. The caves were not only places of shelter for people out walking; but here young men were initiated, ceremonies were held and the dead were buried. Caves are therefore also of great significance for the present generation.